Smart Dunku

by Amrita Navin Satsangi

STANDING in front of Lovlin Restaurant Jhagru Jackal was licking his lips.

"Boss, think of something, I am feeling very hungry. Do you have money?" Jhagru asked Jaggu Wolf standing near him.

Staring at him angrily Jaggu answered, "Don't talk about money. Since last few months I am myself in a tight position."

"But boss, I am very hungry," moving his hands on his stomach, Jhagru insisted.

"So have I had a feast? Even I am also hungry."

"Then why don't you think of something by which we can get tasty food."

"I am thinking but no use."

"Boss, have a look at the restaurant in front. Dunku is sitting on the seat behind and having snacks all alone. Let us go on his seat and order what he is already having. And then after having snacks, we will get up and come back before he comes.

"And if someone asks for the bill?"

"We will say that the donkey will pay the bill."

"Wow! What an idea! You have for the first time made me happy. Come on, let us go."

They entered the restaurant and said 'hi' to Dunku.

"How are you Dunku?"

“I am good,” Dunku answered.

Both sat with him and ordered 2 plates of snacks. As both got up after having stomachful, the Manager of the restaurant Bholi Bear stopped them and said, “Please pay the bill, sir.”

“Listen Manager, that donkey who is sitting there, with whom we had our breakfast is our friend. He will pay the bill.”

“I don't know whether he is your friend or not but he is a waiter here. He works part time and his duty will start shortly. He has already paid his bill earlier. Now say, will you pay the bill fast or I know other ways too to make you pay.”

Pleading sorry both got out of the situation by giving away their watches, shoes and coat. On coming out Jaggu thrashed Jhagru, “Because of you I have lost my expensive watch and coat, you fool. I will kill you.”

“But boss, how did I know that this stupid donkey will be so smart,” Jhagru replied.

Next day, Jhagru and Jaggu saw Dunku carrying eatables home in great quantity.

“If I don't make a fool of him today, I bet I will change my name,' Jaggu thought and whispered something in the ears of Jhagru.

“Wow boss! You are a genius. Today we will have a feast then.”

“Dear friend Dunku, where are you coming from? What is this bad smell coming out from you of?”

Smelling the packets in Dunku's hands Jaggu said to him. “This is it. What is this bad smelling thing you are taking?”

Jhagru too came by.

"Oh Jaggu, you are here. I am searching for you since long."

Smelling in the air Jhagru said, "Boss, there is a weird smell coming. What can it be?"

"Look, Jhagru too can smell it. How come you cannot? I suggest throw all of it. Do you want to fall ill by taking all this home?" Jaggu insisted.

"Does not matter friends, I will take them like this only. If they are spoilt, I will give them to Blacky Uncle. He will give them to his pets," and Dunku started going. Jaggu then signalled Jhagru.

"Dunku, you will make them ill too," both shouted.

In the meanwhile Inspector Cheetah Singh passed with Mighty Monkey.

Dunku called him out, "Inspector Uncle."

"What is the matter, Dunku?"

"Look uncle, is some kind of dirty smell coming from these things?"

Inspector smelled in the packets and said, "No, not at all. Who said that? Instead, it is smelling good."

Pointing out at the 2, Dunku said, "These 2 are saying."

Seeing the inspector both were already nervous.

"Are you in search of a new prey Jaggu and Jhagru?"

"Oh no, inspector, we were trying to warn him of something bad. Believe us, we smelled something bad," Jaggu argued.

"Then come on, I will take you to a doctor who will treat you," but by then both had disappeared.

"Come Dunku, I will drop you home and be careful of these scoundrels," Inspector warned him.

"Don't worry uncle, I know to deal with these rogues."

"Very well Dunku, you have become sensible."

"That I am," Dunku replied smilingly.

Jhagru and Jaggu were thankful that they were saved.

"Boss, this Dunku has become very clever. I have heard that he is studying in town."

"A donkey will always be a donkey, understood? And I will teach him a lesson. Does not matter anyhow but I will make him bite dust sometime," Jaggu said.

Next day, Dunku got his salary. It was midnight and the road was isolated. Suddenly, 2 shadows came and stood in front of him.

"Hand over to me whatever you have," pointing out their revolver towards him, the shadows said.

"Look, I know who you both are. It would be sensible to leave my way or do not repent later," Dunku warned.

"You donkey, are you trying to scare us? Come on quickly take out the things or…."

Dunku suddenly jumped in the air and kicked both of them on their faces.

Both screamed with pain and fell down. Leaving them Dunku proceeded.

"Boss, you said you will make him bite dust but he has done that with us," Jhagru groaned in pain.

Jaggu promised in his heart that from now he would not rob any donkey because they had become smart. ●

Tour of the House

by Parshish

THERE WAS a house that looked monotonous standing at a place for very long. It felt like going for roaming somewhere. It told this to the sparrow living in it. The bird laughed.

It asked the lizard living in a crevice. The lizard advised, “If you feel so, go ahead. But come back before night falls.”

The house rose like wind and flew off. It went around the world.

‘Ah ... ha, the world is so beautiful,’ it thought. ‘Like a fool I used to keep standing at a place. I did not enjoy life till now living with Ramu, his wife, 2 children and mother. Now I will not return. I will roam like this and enjoy life. Man has made me a slave of his.’

Looking at the hills, jungles, streams and rivers it was advancing ahead. It found many houses on the way. They stopped it and asked, "What is the matter, after all? Why are you running like that leaving such good people? God knows what kind of people next do you meet in life."

"I am not a fool like you," the house said. "I have got my senses back. I want to live life. Man makes us a fool. He himself sings and dances around but keeps us tied to a place."

"Man does not fool us. He loves us," other houses explained him. "You have roamed a lot. Now go back. He will be happy to see you. He will celebrate. He will decorate you with lamps and will paint you."

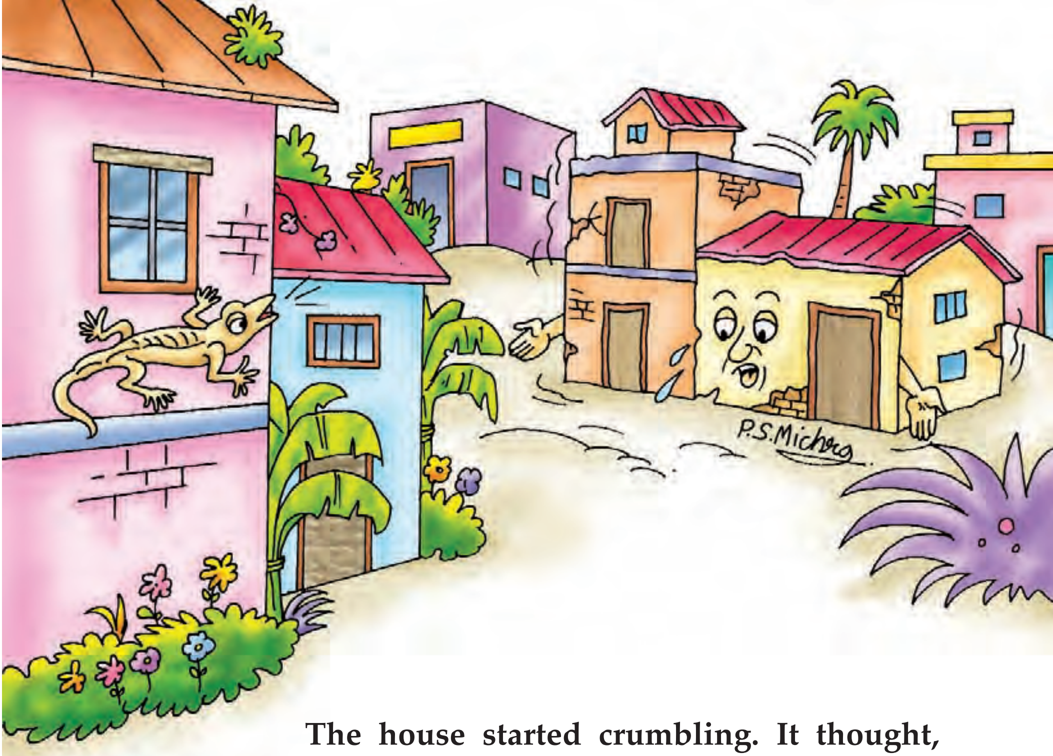

"Sorry, you fools," and he ran away from them.

It finally stopped at one place as it was tired. It took shelter in a lonely place.

Such a long journey had broken it but it did not want to return. He stayed put there itself, far away from man.

Slowly, the doors and windows of the house became loose. Coat of paint too started coming out. It was covered with dust from top to bottom. Termites and ants made it their home.

The house started crumbling. It thought, 'What bad days have come. I was so beautiful and big. My walls used to shine. My verandah used to look pretty with flowers. Ramu's wife used to worship me in morning and evening by lighting lamp. It is not good to pick up fight with man. He knew my worth. That is why it got me repaired of small breakages. Will he recognise me now?'

The house returned again. Reaching its place he saw, Ramu had already placed another small and beautiful house in its place. The new house was smelling beautifully of flowers. It was as if bathing in moonlight and banana leaf caressing it.

A lizard clinging to its wall said, "You fool, you have delayed a lot in coming. You saw how I cling here. Our good is in being with man and not in going away."

The house had no words. It just crumbled down slowly. ●

Be Smart and Helpful

PINTOO AND Sonu lived in the same residential block. Pintoo's father was a rich businessman, whereas Sonu's father was rickshawpuller. Pintoo used to get handsome pocket-money but Sonu used to get 1 or 2 odd rupees, only as pocket-money.

Both of them studied in the same school. Pintoo spent lot of money on his friends to entertain them. He was haughty as well. He was convinced that that he was from a rich family and he could do anything. His behaviour with his teachers was also not good.

Sonu, who was from a poor family was well-behaved and innocent. He obeyed all his teachers. He was always ready to help when he was asked for a help. Everybody loved him for his good nature.

This made Pintoo highly jealous of Sonu. He wondered why everybody loved a son of rickshawpuller and not him though he was from a rich family.

One day, Pintoo went out for picnic with his friends in the park next to the lake.

By evening all the friends returned home after the picnic.

He went to lake to wash his face. Suddenly, he slipped and fell in the lake.

Sonu was walking down the road near the lake to visit his uncle.

Suddenly, he heard someone was drowning in the lake. Sonu went near the lake when he heard someone shouting, 'help... help... help'. He knew swimming. He quickly jumped in the lake and he pulled out Pintoo.

Pintoo was unconscious. Sonu was kind-hearted and he started crying.

The crowd gathered and Pintoo was taken to the hospital.

When Pintoo came to his senses, he was told that his saviour was none other than Sonu. His eyes filled with tears. He apologised to Sonu for his unfriendly behaviour.

The Doctor said, "My son, everybody on the earth is equal. Colour does not matter. One should know how to be helpful."

Pintoo's parents hugged Sonu. Even Pintoo was delighted to have Sonu as his friend.

Proud Curtain

by Kamal Kishore Sanyal

TWO CURTAINS were hanging on the door of a house. One of them was white in colour with black stripes. It was a simple one. The other one was colourful and very proud of itself. It teased the white one everytime.

One day, Chintoo, son of the house owner was eating an ice-cream. Suddenly, his leg slipped and he fell on the white curtain. The curtain took control of him.

The boy did not get hurt but the ice-cream fell on the curtain. It got stained.

The proud curtain teased him, “You were very proud of your white colour. Now go and show this dirty face of yours to everyone.”

White curtain said, “What have I spoilt of you that you keep teasing me like this. I don't feel bad that I have been stained but am happy that I have been able to save someone from getting hurt.”

In the meantime Chintoo's mother came by. She consoled Chintoo.

Chintoo's father said, “The curtain has got stained. It has to be washed.”

Mother brought down the curtain and put it for wash in the washing machine.

After some time the curtain came out clean and sparkling.

The proud curtain again said, “After wash you don't have your earlier shine which I have. You also have creases. You are looking like a squeezed sugarcane.”

The white curtain did not want to quarrel, so it kept quiet. From now on whenever the white curtain got slightest of stain, it was immediately washed. This kept it sparkling white always.

On the other hand because the stains on colourful curtain were not visible therefore it was not washed once also. So it was getting dirty over the time.

The colourful cloth teased the white curtain all the time.

After some days Chintoo's father got a puppy in the house. He was named Sheroo. He was white in colour and had black spots.

Sheroo and the white curtain became friends. The proud colourful curtain was jealous seeing them.

One day, white curtain said to Sheroo, “Tell me something about you, Sheroo.”

Sheroo said, “I was born in the house of the boss of Chintoo's father. My mother stays in their house. My father lives in the neighbour Sharma Uncle’s house. We were 3 brothers born. It was not possible for all of us to stay in one house. So we were all sent to different houses.

"Chintoo's father liked me."

Sheroo asked the curtain, "You too tell me about yourself."

The curtain said, "My story is quite similar to yours. I have been woven by joining so many threads. These black stripes have been drawn on me through machines. Then I came to the shop along with my brothers.

"Chintoo's father bought me and hung me on the door."

Pointing towards the proud curtain Sheroo said, "Then you and this colourful curtain are brothers. But he teases you. Why don't you say anything to him?"

White curtain said, "I don't want to be like him."

The proud curtain was listening to them.

He had decided that he would teach Sheroo a lesson.

One day, Sheroo was crossing the door running. The proud curtain came in the way and the dog fell. Sheroo got wild.

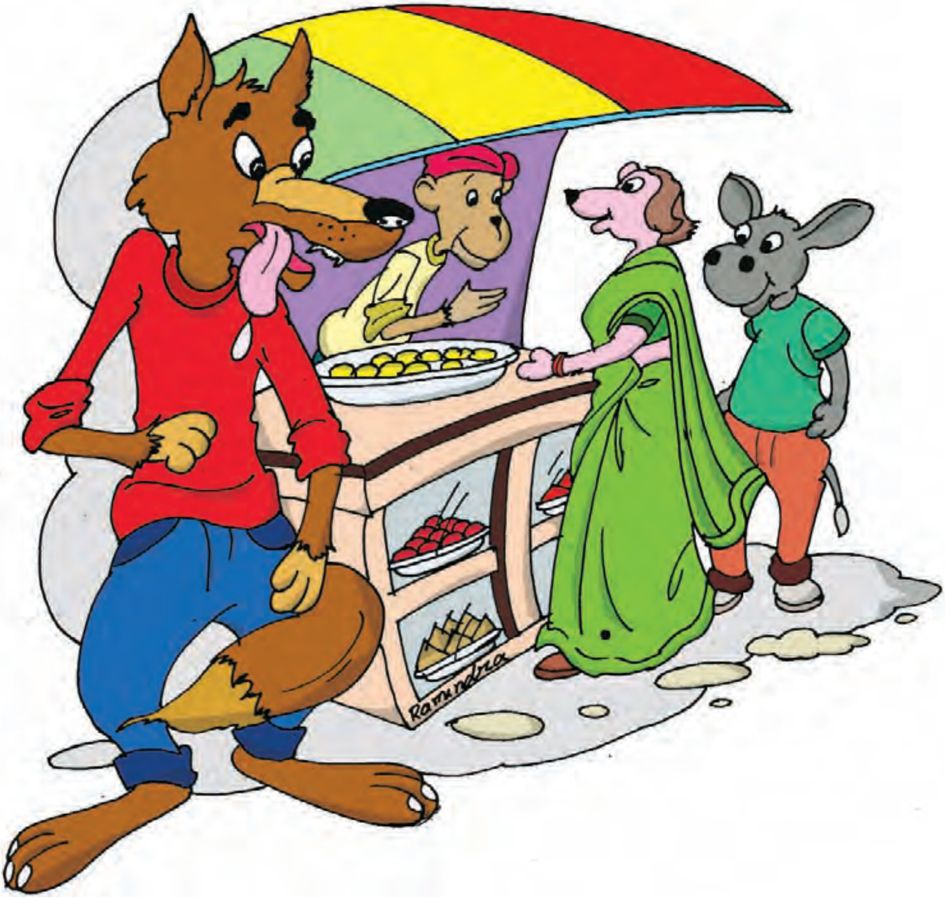

He took a leap and tore the curtain apart with his sharp teeth.

Chintoo saw and shouted, "Mummy, papa, look, Sheroo has torn the curtain."

Father said, "Does not matter. It has gone quite old and dirty. It was hanging absurdly."

"Now it can be used as a mopper," and mother tore it into 4 pieces.

Looking at the white curtain father said, "Tomorrow we will go and buy a similar white curtain so that both look alike." ●

Rasgullas of Chamcham Halwai

by Dr Rajiv Gupta

CHALU Fox was used to eating things for free. He was a glutton. One day, he was passing through Chamcham Halwai's shop when he saw big and round rasgullas in his shop, His mouth watered.

Chamcham Halwai's rasgullas were famous all over Champakvan. Anyone who would eat them once would want to eat them again. Chamcham Monkey was the shop's owner.

"Wow! What lovely juicy rasgullas. What if I get to eat them for free,' standing in front of the shop, wicked fox thought.

The shop was crowded. Chamcham was finding it difficult to handle them.

Chalu kept thinking for some time. Then he digged into his pocket. There were 200 rupees.

"They will be of use if I get caught, otherwise I will eat them for free," humming in his heart the fox entered Chamcham's shop.

"What do you want? Or have you just come for no reason?" giving him a cold look, Chamcham said. He knew him very well.

"Oh no, Chamcham, I have come to take 2 kg rasgullas. Weigh and pack them for me."

"Do you have money? No debts."

"Yes, yes I have," showing him 2 notes of 100 rupees each the fox said.

"Good, good, take them from the helper," Chamcham became humble seeing money in the fox's hand. Calling out the helper he ordered him to pack 2 kg rasgullas and himself became busy in talking to other customers.

Chalu smartly took the packed rasgullas and slipped off without paying money to the helper. Helper thought that Chalu must have paid to the master.

When Chamcham remembered Chalu after finishing with other customers, he asked his helper about money from Chalu. He held his head on hearing the helper. Chalu Fox had cheated him of 200 rupees.

'Chalu, where will you go. You will again return to take more,' he thought and got busy with his customers.

That day Chalu ate rasgullas till his belly was full. He was very happy on his success. He could not forget the taste of rasgullas.

But how could he again go to Chamcham's shop. He was sure that if Chamcham saw him anywhere near his shop, he would beat him black and blue.

Some days passed. When he could not resist anymore, he again reached Chamcham's shop. He was very happy to see from far that someone else was sitting in place of Chamcham on his shop. Someone with long and white beard and moustache.

'Probably, he is Chamcham's father. I can now have rasgullas for free,' and he digged into his pocket. Like always it had 200 rupees.

"Pack 2 kg rasgullas for me," waving the 2 notes in the air, Chalu Fox asked Chamcham's father, "Has Chamcham gone out somewhere?"

"Yes, to his in-laws place," the old man replied asking the helper to weigh rasgullas for him. "Do you know Chamcham?"

"Chamcham is my good friend."

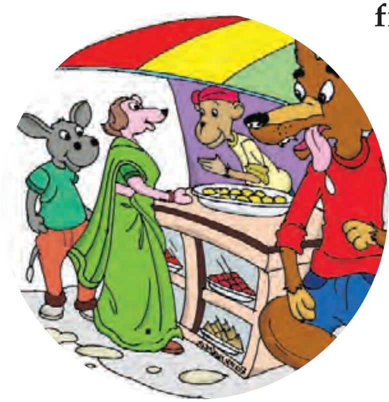

Chamcham's father smiled. Then getting up from his seat he went away somewhere.

Chalu thought of not missing this moment. Taking the box from the helper he slipped off quickly from the shop. But as he walked out of the shop, a stick hit him hard on his back.

Chamcham's father was standing with the stick behind the shop. He shouted, "You thief, going away without paying money."

"Uncle, Chamcham is my friend. Money is not a great matter between us."

"You liar, I am Chamcham myself. I don't make friends with animals like you. I had disguised myself to catch you red-handed. Earlier too, you had taken 2 kg rasgullas from my shop," pulling out his artificial beard and moustache, he shouted.

Chalu Fox was standing dazed. He did not know what to do in this situation.

All the servants of the shop were coming towards him with sticks. Many animals collected to see the scene.

He fell on Chamcham's feet, pleading forgiveness. He not only returned the rasgullas but cleared his earlier dues too. He was ashamed of his misdeed.

After some days Chalu forgot his beating and disrespect. But not the taste of rasgullas. ●

Secret of Shining

A BUS was wheeling away towards its destination. It was 11 o'clock at night. Modern Public School has arranged a school tour to Nainital for class 8 students. Four teachers were also accompanying them.

Children were very happy. Nobody was feeling

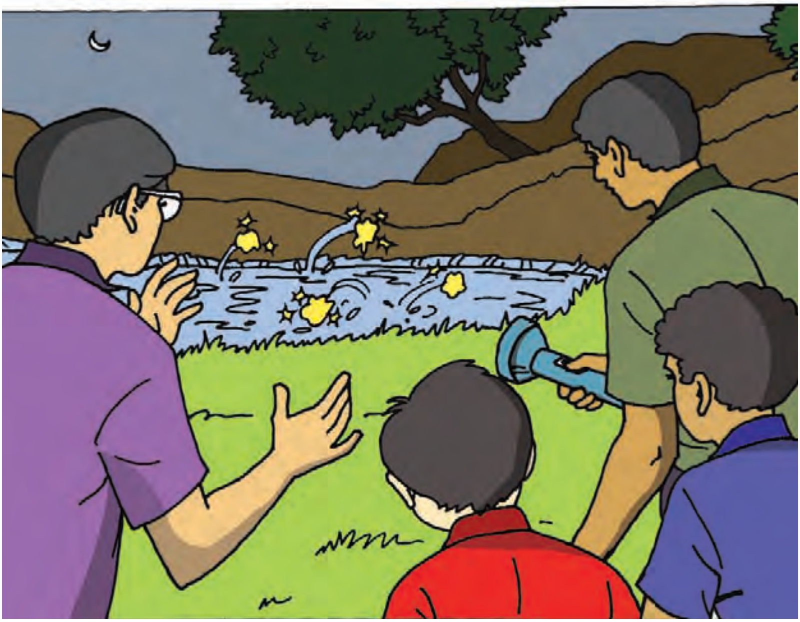

Stones

by Dr Rajiv Gupta

sleepy even at midnight.

They were enjoying themselves joking and singing songs.

Suddenly, the bus started shaking badly. The driver somehow took control of the bus and halted it to the side of the road. Then he got down to check the engine.

"What happened, driver?" Mohit asked.

"The engine has developed some snag," driver answered. He checked but could not get any clue about the snag.

"We will have to send a helper to Bareilly to call a mechanic. It will take a long time," driver said.

He stopped a bus coming from the opposite direction and giving his helper some instruction told him to bring a mechanic.

It was pitch dark all around. Even children's faces hung along with those of the teachers. They all sat quiet in the bus for some time.

"Oh look! What is there at the banks of the lake? How strangely are those shining stones jumping?" looking out of the window Ravi said.

"Yes, they are," all looked towards the lake.

They actually could see shining stones jumping and dancing.

"How strange is this? Ankur Sir, the science teacher wondered.

"Probably sir, it is some ghost working. Neither do stones shine this way nor they dance like this," frightened driver said.

The children got scared at hearing him.

"Shut up, you are a fool. Who believes in ghosts. We must find out this secret," Mayank Sir, who taught Biology, said and started getting down from the bus.

Driver wanted to stop him but with the fear of getting shouted at, he did not.

Seeing the teacher getting down from the bus, others too were encouraged.

The 4 teachers and some courageous children got down and walked towards the lake. They carried 2 torches.

In the light of the torch, when they reached the banks of the lake, they were taken aback. What they were thinking to be stones were actually frogs that were jumping.

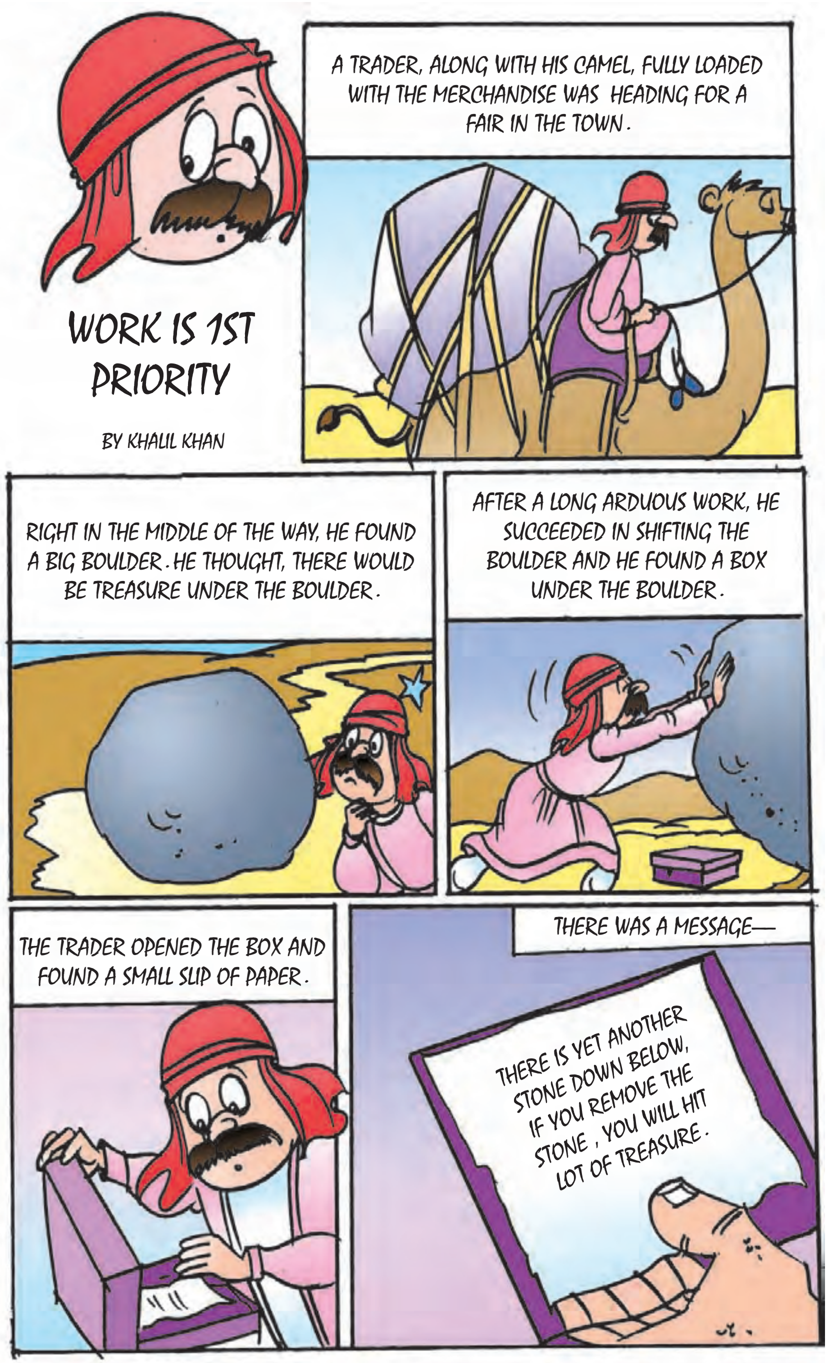

"But how are these frogs shining? Ankur Sir wondered.

"I will tell you. These frogs have swallowed glowworms," Mayank explained.

"Actually, the membrane of their stomach is transparent. That is why they are shining."

Children were listening carefully to their teachers. They were surprised hearing the fact.

If their teachers had not investigated, no one would have known the secret of the shining stones. ●

BITTU SINGH asked mother, "Tell me a work on whose completion I will get rewarded."

"Reward!" mother was surprised. "What is wrong with you early in the morning? Whatever work you have, complete that first. The reward that we get on successful completion of a work is its best prize."

Bittu Singh heard his mother carefully but he felt that everyone does the same work. He came out of his house. He met his friend Pintu.

"Where are you going?" Pintu asked.

"I was coming to you. Elephant Sir has said to convey that practice for the match will be held in the evening in the holidays. You too are in the team. I was coming to tell you."

"Really?" Bittu said softly.

"Are you not happy? It is a great thing to be part of the team. This time our match will be against 'Queen Team.' Many people will watch it."

"Hm ..." Bittu again nodded.

Pintu sensed that Bittu was not in a mood to talk.

On the other side, Kitto Squirrel was changing her house. Though her things were not many, going up and down again and again was tiring her.

"Bittu, can you help me?" Kitto asked.

"What!" Bittu looked up towards the tree surprisingly.

Kitto was looking at Bittu.

"I am shifting my house but it is taking too long to shift things from here to there. I am tired too. Will you help me?"

"Yes, why not?" and Bittu picked up her things. "You go ahead. I will come behind you."

While returning Bittu was deeply thinking about the thankfulness shown by Kitto. She remembered, "Thank you Bittu, you have helped me. You are a good friend."

They met Kalu Crow on the way. He went along with her on morning walks.

"Why did you not come today?" Kalu Crow asked.

"Kitto Squirrel was changing her house. She needed help," Bittu said.

"Oh good…but it is not right to break the routine of the morning walk."

"But it is even better to be of help to someone," Bittu asserted.

"Hm," Kalu Crow was disappointed. Suddenly, he saw Hariyal Parrot who was coming towards them.

"What is the matter, Hariyal?" Kalu Crow asked.

"Come on quick… Peelu Deer is having great pain in his legs. He has hurt it. He cannot get up too," Hariyal replied.

"What happened to him? He used to go to Bitlu Monkey for yoga, is not it?" Bittu asked.

"Yes, Baba made him do an aasan by which his leg nerve got pulled. He cannot walk now," Hariyal said.

"Did Bitlu Baba not give any medicine?" Bittu asked.

"Yes, he has asked him to apply a paste of lime and turmeric and take rest," Hariyal said.

Bittu ran towards the lake with Kalu.

"Listen, Kalu, you reach the dispensary of Meow. Tell doctor Meow about it. We will get Peelu there," Bittu said.

"Hm…what has happened to him today," Kalu murmured. "I was going for my brunch and he has assigned me work as I came. Now I will have to listen to instructions from Meow also. She will also tell me some work. She will ask me, "Clean the table, take out things for plaster. But now I will have to go." Getting annoyed at Bittu, he proceeded to Dr Meow's clinic.

Bittu saw that Peelu was resting at the banks of the lake. He could not get up.

"Don't worry Peelu, we have come. I am Hariyal, Kitto Squirrel is here and other friends too have come," Bittu said.

Peelu opened his eyes. He was groaning with pain.

Place both your legs on my shoulders and stand up slowly."

By then Bhima Bear too had come with a small cart.

"Yes, now you shift towards the cart. First, sit and then lie down. We will go to Dr Meow's hospital," he said.

Pulling his cart Bhima took Peelu to the hospital. Bittu along with his friends went too.

Meow had made everything ready and Kalu Crow was standing with a white apron on his waist.

"Oh, great Kalu, you too have become a doctor," Kitto Squirrel said.

"Hm ... Meow does not spare anyone from work once you get to her," Kalu said.

"What!" Dr Meow reacted with surprise.

"Nothing," Kalu Crow replied.

Peelu's leg was plastered. Dr Meow gave him 5 days medicine and said, "You cannot walk. Take rest at home and yes, one must always work out on the advice of a right instructor. Now-a-days every lane has a teacher like Bitlu who do not know anything except jumping around."

"Well, Peelu, you rest at home, we will do your work," Bittu said.

"Yes," Hariyal said.

Bhima Bear said, "I will bring your meals."

"But I will only talk to you," Kitto laughed.

After some days, the elephant declared before starting the match that the reward for the best sportsman will be given to Bittu Singh. Everyone was surprised.

"Why?"

"A good sportsman is one who not only plays well but must have a good sportsman spirit. The help that Bittu gave to Kitto and Peelu is the real sportsman spirit," and everyone clapped. ●

Kalu Ties a Tie

by Aparna Majumdar

GOLU BEAR lived in Champakvan. One day, he found a strange-looking cloth. Seeing the shape of the cloth, he wondered what it was?

On looking at it carefully, he noticed that one end of it resembled a tail of a monkey and the other end, head of a snake. He got frightened.

'Oh, this is just a cloth. Why am I getting frightened of it? But which end of it is straight? This slimmer side... no... this broader side must be straight, but what should be done of it?' Thinking this, he tried tying it to his waist.

The strange-looking cloth was small and could not be tied.

He again murmured, 'Oh no, this is quite small. Probably, it is supposed to be tied to the leg.'

He tried to wrap it around his leg. As he left the cloth after tying it to his leg, the cloth slipped down.

Suddenly, Soni Deer passed from there. Seeing this strange-looking cloth in Golu's hand, she halted and asked, "What is there in your hand, Golu?"

"I don't know, can you tell what it is?" showing her the cloth Golu asked.

"Oh, this is a ribbon, you tie it on the head," Soni tried tying the cloth on her head but could not.

Looking at the cloth carefully, Soni asked, "Brother Golu, it cannot be a ribbon. Both of its ends are uneven.

"Why do not we go and ask the elephant. Only he can tell what it is."

"Yes, let us go and ask brother elephant," and both went to the elephant.

The elephant was resting. He had just eaten sugarcane from somebody's field.

Seeing Golu and Soni together he asked, "What is the matter? Why have both of you come together to me?"

"You see brother, Golu has found a strange-looking cloth. We cannot understand what it is," showing the cloth Soni said.

Turning the cloth up and down, elephant said, "I think, it is a muffler."

"No, no, how can it be a muffler?" Golu said.

"Look, it is tied in such a manner in the neck," showing them the elephant tied it around his neck.

Golu commented, “But this is small, brother.”

“Stupid, it must be a child's muffler,” the elephant said.

“No, it cannot be a muffler. It is smaller from one side and broader from the other,” Soni showed the cloth.

Golu and Soni Elephant were not ready to believe the elephant. All the 3 were arguing when Chunki Monkey jumped in between them. He asked, “What is the matter? Why are you arguing?”

Golu said, “Look Chunki, what is it? Elephant brother is saying it is a muffler. Is a muffler like this?”

Looking at the cloth Chunki said, “You are right. It cannot be a muffler.”

Kalu Crow, sitting on the next branch was listening to them for long. He could not resist.

Getting down of the tree, he came near them and said, “All of you are fools. This is neither a ribbon nor a muffler.

This strange cloth is called a 'tie'. People in the cities neither tie it around their waist nor their head but around their necks.”

“How around the neck?” everyone asked together.

“Like this,” and Kalu tied the tie in his neck and flew away in the sky. ●

Friendship

by Raj Kumar Dhar

PEPSI DOG lived in a beautiful colony. His master took care of him. He bathed him with soap, gave him good food to eat and a ride in his car.

The stray dogs of the town were jealous of him.

Many extended a hand of friendship towards him. But he barked at them and shooed them away. To tease him, the stray dogs went close to him and called him Bhoonku and came back.

One day, Tinku, Sonu, Bunti and Monu dogs went to the bungalow where Pepsi lived and peeped inside the gate.

Earlier, when they did that, Pepsi came out barking at them at the slightest sound and if the gate was open by chance, he made them run. But that day he did not come.

Banti asked his friends, "What is the matter Today, Bhoonku has not come?"

"Who knows? Maybe, he has gone out somewhere. The car is not seen too. He is enjoying," Tinku said.

"Listen carefully, somebody is calling out faintly from inside. It must be Bhoonku," Monu guessed.

"Come on, let us see. Maybe, Bhoonku is not well," and Monu entered the gate.

His friends too followed him. The sound was coming from behind the house. The dogs quickly went behind where they saw 2 men shoving Pepsi away in a sack.

"Bhoonku is in trouble. These people are taking him away somewhere. We must help him. The house is deserted. The owner has gone some where," Tinku said.

"What should we do?" Bunti asked.

"Attack! Bite them all," Tinku asserted.

And they all pounced upon the 2 men. The thieves could not take control and were bruised badly. They fled.

After that Bunti took out Pepsi from the sack and untied his feet.

"Friends, forgive me. Though I did not behave well with you, you saved me from the thieves. I will always be grateful.

"You all are my friends from today. Come on, shake hands," Pepsi offered one of his front limb for friendship.

The stray dogs too promptly extended their front legs. They loved it.

"Where is your master?" Tinku asked.

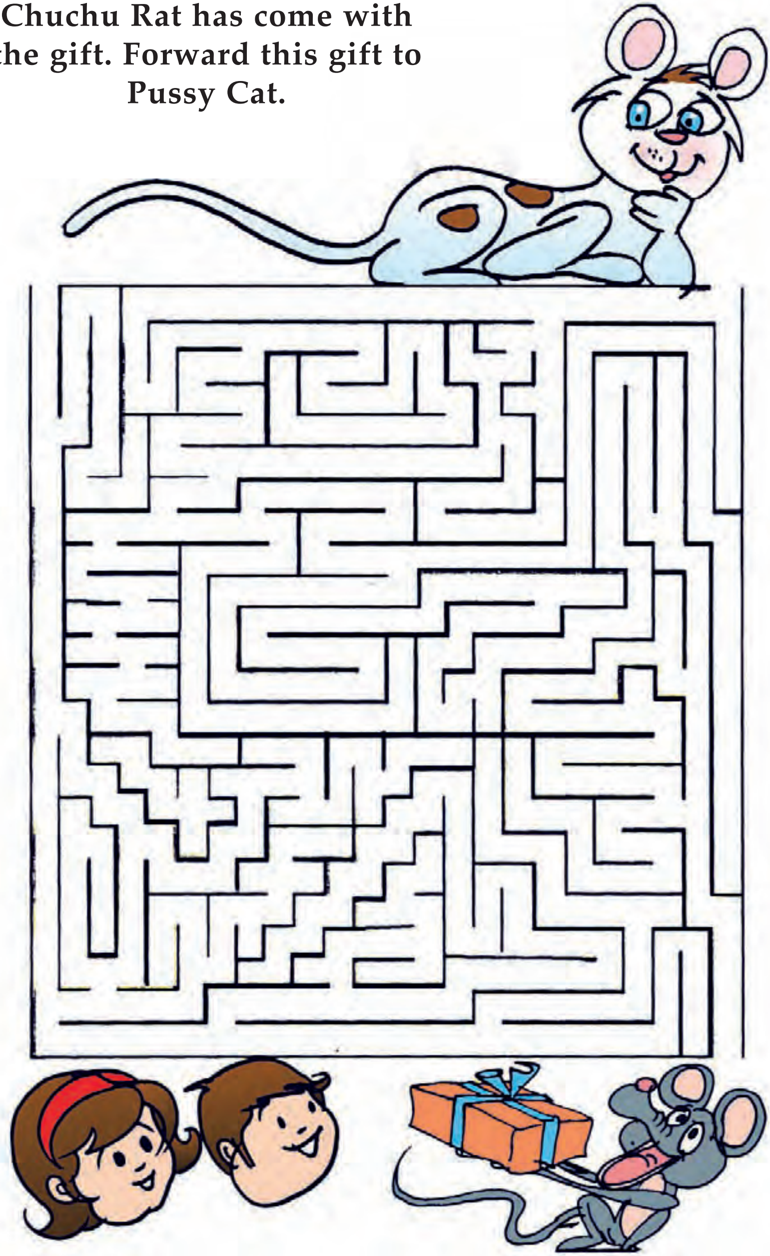

"He was playing with me when his master rang him with some important work. He did not even shut the door. I was resting when 2 men came and nabbed me. Pepsi narrated, "They would have sold me somewhere. I am saved. Please set here, I will bring some food for you."

"No, on some other time. We are happy that you have made us your friend," Bunti said.

"With comforts I had become arrogant. I will now never hate anyone and will live happily with all. You keep coming, we will play and yes, take a ride in the car too," Pepsi said.

The dogs jumped with happiness. Then bidding bye to Pepsi, they left. They were happy that they had done a good deed. ●

Test of Honesty

by Dr M. K. Majumdar

GAJJU Elephant opened a grocery shop in Satpuravan. Slowly, the business started doing well. Customers started thronging his shop. Now it became impossible for Gajju to handle them alone. He felt the need for a helper.

He thought, why not keep a servant to help him do the chores. He immediately put a board outside the shop announcing, “Wanted—A hard-working and honest helper.”

Reading about the vacancy many animals came to ask for it. But the elephant could not find a single animal worth employing.

Many days passed. One day, Jumpy Monkey came to his shop to ask for work.

Gajju asked Jumpy, “If I employ you on my shop, will you work honestly?”

“Yes, I will,” Jumpy replied.

“Will you speak to the customer as I tell you to?”

“Yes, I will do as you say.”

Gajju called Jumpy inside the shop. Giving him rice he said, “I have mixed small pebbles of stones in it. What will you say if the customer asks how is the rice?”

Jumpy kept quiet after listening to Gajju. He did not reply.

Gajju further instructed, “You say that the rice is clean and there are no stones in it.”

Jumpy did not say anything.

Picking up a packet of bread in his hands Gajju said, “Look, this bread is 3-day-old. If anyone asks, 'is the bread fresh?' what will you say?”

Jumpy kept quiet.

Gajju said, “You must say, ‘the bread is fresh and latest. By now you must have understood my point well. So start working from today.”

As Gajju finished what he had to say, Jumpy finally spoke, “Sir, I don't think I can work for you.”

Surprised Gajju asked, “Why?”

“You preach something else and practise something else. You yourself tell lies and advises others not to do so. Is this honesty? I don't wish to work for you," saying this, Jumpy moved out of the shop.

Stopping Jumpy Gajju said, "Good, you have passed my test. You can work on my shop from today."

"But what about all that you just said," Jumpy was shocked.

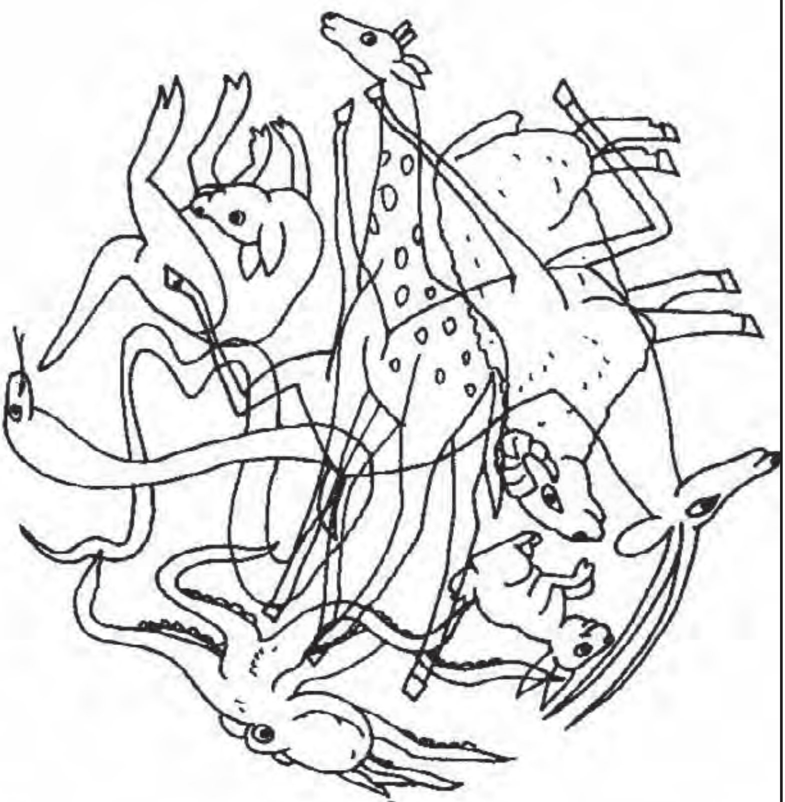

"I had spoken all that lies to test you. I was in search of an honest helper like you who could call a spade a spade." ●

Mango from the Parachute

by Ashesh

"I CAN fall any time," Lallu Mango said to Tailor Bird Chhutki.

"Why do you think like that? You are healthy just now and your face is bright," Chhutki said, opening her long sharp beak.

"I am totally ripe. All the pulp in my stomach has turned into juice. My head cannot handle my weight now. My tip is coming out as I have become soft."

"Oh, this is bad news," Chhutki replied. The squirrel sitting on the branch in front said.

"It is good news not bad. The owner of the mango tree has plucked all mangoes this time and taken away. This was left by mistake. I will love to see it drop and hit the earth."

Chhutki asked, "What will you get out of it?"

"It will be fun to see it fall with a thud on the ground and its belly burst with its juice coming out as fountain. What a sight it will be!"

"Will you be happy with such a condition of Lallu? I will be shocked. It can die too."

The squirrel said, "I will go down and drink its juice and dance. See how it drops when I touch it."

As the squirrel leaped towards Lallu, Chutki took a flight and pierced her sharp beak into the head of the squirrel.

The squirrel writhed with pain and got down from the tree.

"Look, I have saved you."

Lallu thanked her and said, "But still I have to drop down and die. If you ask my last wish, I will tell you."

Chhutki was surprised.

"What is your last wish, my friend?"

"There is dust and sand beneath. If I fall on it, I will not be of any use to anyone. Do something by which I may fall and still be of use for someone."

"I will just be back," Chhutki flew off. She returned in a minute with some threads. By weaving the mango leaves she made a small parachute. Then she clipped it to the branch on which Lallu was hanging.

"I will now place it in such a manner under you that as you will drop, you will be taken down slowly sliding."

Seeing Lallu sad, Chhutki asked, "What is the matter?"

"Look, Bhondu Donkey is coming this side."

"Don't worry. Donkeys don't eat mangoes. Look, a child is romping and coming this side."

As Bhondu went away, the child started playing under the tree.

Suddenly, a gust of wind blew and the mango fell. It was cradling on the seat of leaves made by Chhutki. The parachute suddenly broke open with the weight of mango.

"Bon voyage," Chhutki said.

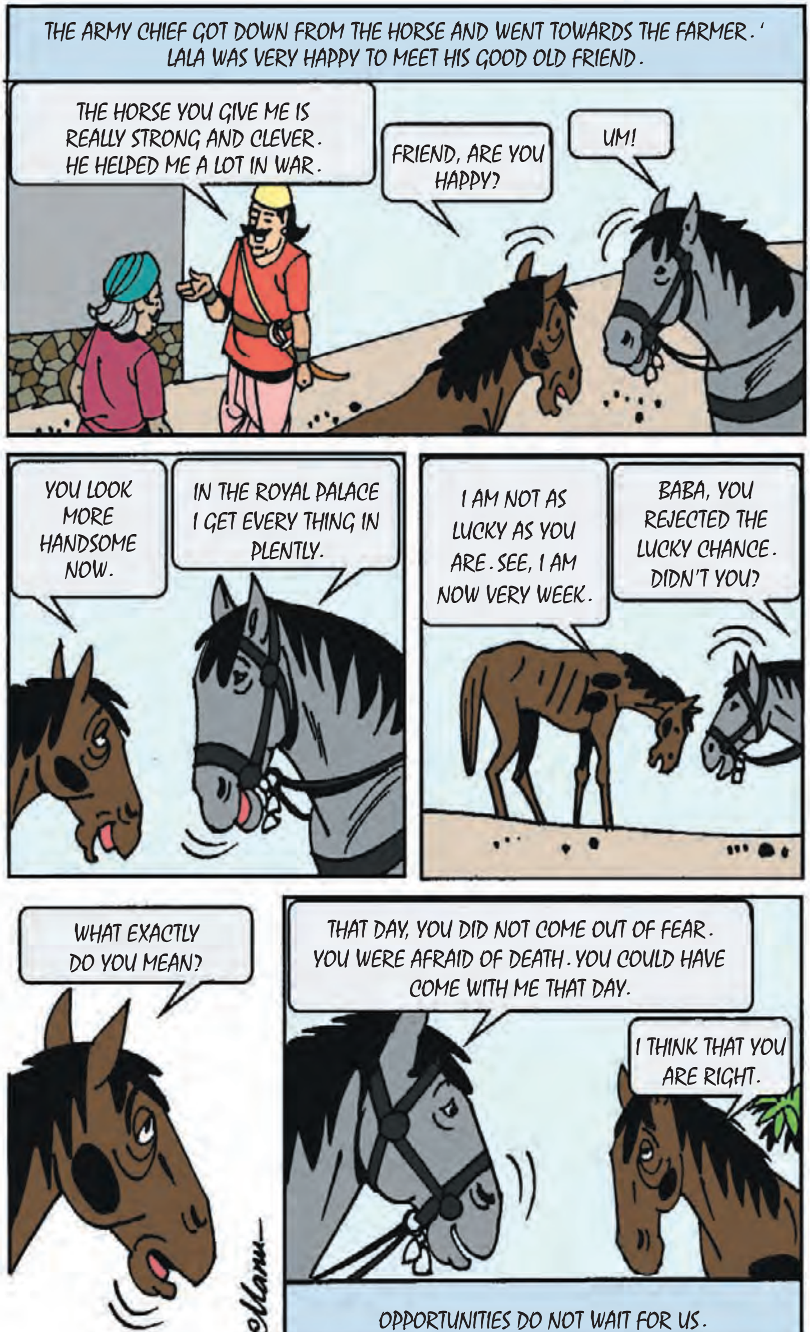

"Thanks friend," getting down the parachute, Lallu said.

Next moment the mango fell in front of the child.

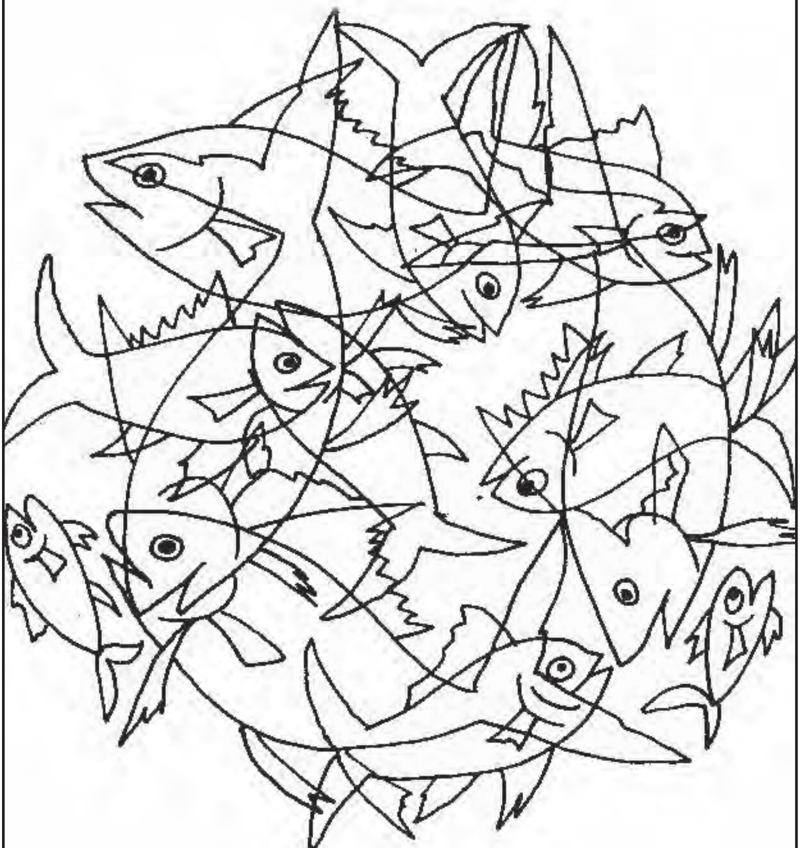

The child was very happy to get a mango and a parachute together. ●

Beaten By Own Reflection

by Om Prakash Kshatriya

CHUCHU MOUSE thought, 'Exams are close. I have to prepare for them. Bony Cat keeps troubling me. I must think of some idea to keep Bony away from by burrow.'

He thought deeply and hit upon a plan. He installed a mirror on his main door which could reflect the image of anyone who passed in and out from his door.

Bony came to Chuchu's house everyday. Today too she came at the same time. As she came to Chuchu's burrow, she saw herself in the mirror.

Chuchu was ready. As he saw Bony, he said, "You know Soni, Bony looks same as you. She must be just coming."

Bony heard this and stopped at the door to listen to Chuchu carefully.

"Copy Bony when she comes. Do as she does, understood?" When Chuchu said, Bony looked into the mirror. Soni of the mirror was looking at her too.

Bony got angry. How could a look-alike cat come here. She could not tolerate. Bony meowed. The cat in the mirror meowed too.

As the mirror was her reflection, the image was reflecting whatever Bony was doing. Surprised Bony left the place.

She could not understand how she could get rid of Soni Cat.

Bony thought that Chuchu had brought Soni for his protection. 'Who is interested in inviting trouble by coming here,' thinking, she returned home.

She met Binny on the way. She stopped Bony and asked, "How are you, sister?"

Bony had just faced a problem. She told Binny everything. "These days cats are protecting rats."

"Really?" Binny said, "First of all, it is not possible that a cat guards a rat and secondly, even if it is true, no cat can win over you."

"But the truth is that a cat named Soni is guarding the rat. I have seen her with my eyes," Bony said.

"Then you must fight with her. A tamed cat is not very powerful. She will lose the fight," and Binny went away.

Bony too thought that domestic animals are weak as they forget fighting. And so they can be easily won over.

Thinking this, Bony left for Chuchu's house. 'Today, I will either throw her out or kill her.'

On reaching Chuchu's house, she started screaming, "You Soni, come out in front of me," and she came in front of the mirror.

She again saw her image in the mirror. Seeing Soni she again meowed in anger, "You wait, I will just show you," and she leaped.

Bony banged into the mirror. The mirror broke and hit her on the head. It started bleeding. Chuchu shouted, "Well done Soni, Bony has got hurt. Don't leave her."

A piece of mirror hit Bony's head. Blood ran down to her eyes. She could not see properly. She groaned with pain. Now she thought it was better to run away from there.

She fled. Since that day, she never came to Chuchu's place. But for safety Chuchu had installed another mirror at the entrance of his burrow. Maybe, she came back some time.

Many days passed. But Bony could not understand the secret of Soni.

She did not know that she was defeated by her own reflection. ●

NATTU MOUSE was a naughty mouse. He was fond of doing all those things, which his mother refrained him from doing. Nattu Mouse had 2 more siblings — Neetu and Pintoo. Both of them were very obedient. Their mother thus was very happy with them. Nattu Mouse used to come out with new mischiefs every day and used to trouble his mother.

One day, Nattu Mouse along with his brothers was having fun in the bathroom. He had come to the bathroom for the first time.

Their mother forewarned Nattu Mouse and his brothers, "Children, the floor in the bathroom is very slippery, so don't run around. Don't even look

Naughty Nattu in Trouble

by Setu Jain

at the bathtub. It is very dangerous. Better remember my advice, it is for your own good."

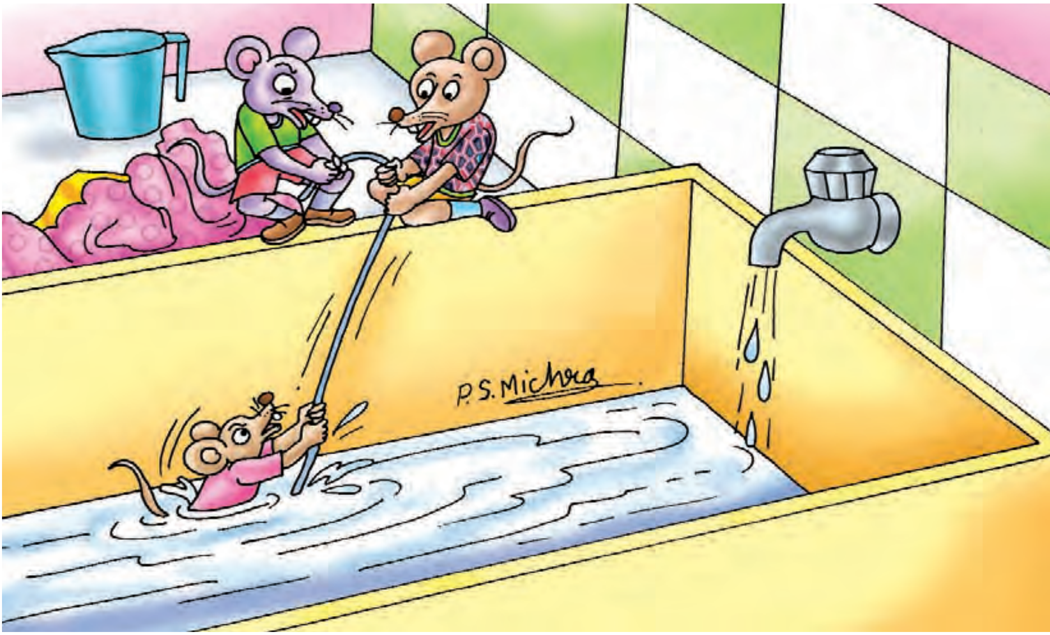

But, as usual, Nattu Mouse did not care his mother's advice. He was mighty delighted to his reflections in the coloured tiles in the bathroom. He was enjoying running around on the glossy floor of the bathroom. He was enjoying his reflections in the mirror while running around.

Neetu and Pintoo watched Nattu Mouse in usual mischievous activities. They tried to remind Nattu Mouse of their mother's advice. Neetu said, "Nattu, mother has asked not to run around here."

Pintoo also said, "Mother has also asked not to jump around. If you do so, you will be in trouble."

But naughty Nattu Mouse ignored his mother's advices completely. He also ignored his brother's reminders. He started running and jumping around everywhere. He even climbed the tub in the bathroom and began running around on the edges.

As it was expected, Nattu Mouse slipped in the tub. Initially, he tried a lot to come out of the tub, but he soon realised the reality and failed to come out of the tub.

After putting in lot of effort to come out of the tub, he soon realised that the walls of the bathtub were too smooth. It made him slip 2 steps back after climbing every time.

He quickly realised that if he did not come out of the bathtub, soon he will die of thirst and hunger.

Neetu and Pintoo were too scared to find Nattu Mouse inside the bathtub. Their mother too was not around to help them.

Neetu also tried a lot by lowering his tail in the bathtub so that Nattu could climb out of the bathtub by holding Neetu's tail, but the small tail of the young mouse kids were of no use.

Suddenly, Pintoo struck with an idea. He started pulling a petticoat kept on the edges of the bathtub. Neetu also helped his brother and somehow both brothers succeeded in pulling the petticoat.

But still the petticoat was far beyond the reach of Nattu Mouse. Luckily, Neetu and Pintoo saw the string of the petticoat. Neetu started pulling the string from one side and Pintoo started pulling the petticoat from the other side.

The efforts of the bothers paid and they succeeded in pulling out the string from the petticoat.

Both the brothers held one of the ends of the string firmly in their hands and lowered the other end of the string in the bathtub. Nattu Mouse was now able to hold the end of the string.

Nattu Mouse began climbing the string. His brothers also helped and finally Nattu was able to come out of the bathtub.

Meanwhile, their mother also came over. When she came to know about the whole situation, her eyes were filled with tears.

She became very happy with the courage displayed by Neetu and Pintoo. She was little angry with Nattu Mouse and said, "Now do you understand how helpful is the advice from elders."

Nattu Mouse too was in tears. He hugged his mother and began crying. Nattu Mouse was saved only because of his brave brothers.

Nattu Mouse deep in heart was thanking his stars that he was saved and firmly resolved that in future, like his other brothers, he would always obey his mother. ●

False Report

by M. Kumar Manoj

INSPECTOR Chatur Singh cheetah, along with other policemen, reached office at 1 pm after patrolling. As he sat, the phone bell rang.

He picked up the phone. A call came from the other side, "Hello, I am Gajraj Elephant, owner of Poonam Jewellery speaking. Can I talk to Inspector Chatur Singh?"

"I am Chatur Singh speaking. Tell me what is the matter?" replied Inspector.

Diamonds of crores of rupees have been looted from my house by 3-4 masked gunmen," the caller informed.

Inspector Chatur Singh asked his driver to take out his vehicle and he started for Seth Gajraj's house with the police team.

They saw that there was darkness around his house. There was no guard at the gate.

Inspector Chatur Singh pushed the door and went into the room and searching the light switch with the torch, he switched on the light. The room lighted up.

To his shock, he saw Gajraj and his wife tied up to a chair. A cloth was stuffed in their mouths.

Inspector Chatur Singh took out the cloth from their mouth and untied them.

Gajraj cried, "I am finished. I am now a bankrupt. They have taken away my diamonds worth crores of rupees."

Inspector took information from them about the theft.

"We were sleeping when suddenly 2-3 masked gunmen entered inside our room. They forced us to open the treasury at gunpoint and took away diamonds worth crores of rupees."

Inspector asked Gajraj, "Which direction did the masked men come from?"

Pointing towards the rear window of the house, Gajraj said, "Probably from there."

"Where did they go?"

"From where they came," Gajraj replied.

Inspector asked, "When did they tie you?"

"While going, they tied us to the chair and stuffed cloth in our mouth," Gajraj informed.

"Don't you have guards?" Inspector asked.

"Both are on leave," Gajraj answered.

"Do you suspect anyone?"

"No, no one," Gajraj replied.

Walking up till the window, inspector examined carefully. He could not find any clue which could be proof enough that someone had entered from the window.

They examined the room properly but could not find anything.

By the time it was morning. Inspector Chatur Singh filed a report and asked for information regarding the guard and the servant.

Seth Gajraj replied, "I do not know anything about the 2. They had promised to return in 2 days."

Chatur Singh was annoyed, "You know that before keeping any servant or guard you must check the details about him thoroughly. Not only this, you must inform the police station about them."

"Both were simple and honest persons. That is why I did not pay much attention to these things. In future I will take care and inform the police station before keeping any new servant."

Months passed but nothing was known about the theft of the diamonds.

Inspector Chatur Singh went to Gajraj and said to him, "You are arrested for getting a false report registered and misleading the police."

Seth Gajraj said, "You cannot arrest me without proof."

Inspector said, "We have the proof as well as the warrant.

"On information about the theft I reached your house. After investigation I could guess that no theft had occurred at all. I reached your house with the police team. That time you and your wife were tied to the chair and your mouths were stuffed with cloth.

"I had my doubts then itself. When your hands and legs were tied and mouth stuffed with cloth, how could you have rung up the police to inform? That means that the diamonds were not stolen."

Hearing the inspector, Seth Gajraj became nervous and his wife started crying with fear.

Inspector went on, "In this plan of yours, your wife and loyal servant Monu were with you. On detailed examination of the matter I found out that you had recently got the diamonds insured.

"In order to acquire the insurance money, you planned the drama of this diamond theft.

"First of all, you sent the guard on leave and then by bribing your servant Monu you bought his loyalty.

"One o'clock at night you rang up the police station. Then as per your instructions your servant tied you and your wife up to the chair and stuffed your mouth with a cloth. He then went away to his village.

"When I investigated the matter, I understood what had conspired. That is why I first went to the village and met Monu.

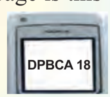

"I said to him, "In order to save himself, Seth Gajraj has named you to the police. According to him his servant Monu has stolen the diamonds. On hearing me he fell on my feet and told me everything honestly."

Inspector Chatur Singh arrested Seth Gajraj. His wife and servant Monu too were arrested for abetment of the crime. ●
